EPISODIC BREAKDOWN

1. Death of Marilyn Monroe, The

Monroe's death was deemed "probable suicide" in 1962. But previously unheard taped interviews with her make-up artist claim she didn't spend her last night alone, but with mafia bosses keen to shut her up.

2. Secret Explosions in the Towers

The official investigation into the Twin Towers has never explained the huge explosions that preceded their collapse, leading one in three to believe that George Bush had a hand in the tragedy. Now an extraordinary new discovery shows the real cause of the explosions, and how they brought the Towers down.

3. Jack the Ripper

For 125 years, the identity of this infamous murderer has remained a mystery. Now, hidden diaries and letters point toward a new suspect, a woman by the name of Lizzie Williams.

4. Loch Ness Monster, The

Nobody has ever proved the existence of this prehistoric creature. Now newly surfaced evidence suggests the whole concept was born when witnesses spotted bathing circus elephants in the 1930s.

5. Nevada Triangle

Millionaire pilot Steve Fossett was the last in a long line to crash in the deadly 'Nevada Triangle'. New scientific evidence is revealing that a unique set of geographical factors creates a lethal force that can down aircraft.

6. Bigfoot

With DNA evidence now revealing the Yeti to be a bear, we follow new evidence that suggests North American Bigfoot is either a Brown Bear or an escaped primate.
