Aging In The Wild

5 x 60' or 1 x 60'

This series explores animals ageing in the wild. We examine the creatures living on the dividing line between life and death. Passionate researchers bring us right into the lives of the animals they study: their ancestors and children, their friends, their struggles and successes. But this isn't just another animal documentary full of beautiful photography, it is also an invitation to take an in-depth look at what your autumn years are like, when you live in the wild. This requires long-term studies, and our researchers guide our trip around the world and bring us into the lives of these wild elders. Their explanations form part of a fascinating narrative, revealing that the process of ageing in animals varies as much as the species themselves. It is impossible not to see this without reflecting on our own experiences along the way.

America's Mississippi

3 x 60'

If the Mississippi river was a playlist, it would be a crazy mix, and each hour of this series explores a radically different location along North America's greatest waterway. In the north, predators like wolves and bobcats prowl. In the Midwest, giant sturgeon occupy the waterway while black bear and coyotes hunt the banks. In the south, wild pigs dodge alligators, and swarms of jellyfish mingle by the million.

The eagle has landed...in our backyards. Nesting on hydro towers, construction beams, in suburban parks, and urban neighbourhoods, bald eagles are an exotic reminder of the wilderness that surrounded many of our cities' landscapes. These majestic predators epitomize survival. Their story is one of opportunism and adaptation in the face of a rapidly changing ecological landscape. We follow the unfolding story of a single breeding pair in the suburbs of Vancouver, Canada, over the course of a year. Via the social media phenomena known as 'nestcams' we are able to witness their amazing lifecycle, and understand the adaptations they've made to be successful in the city. Wildlife biologists, conservationists, rescuers, and online nestcam fans illuminate the lives of our newly arrived wild neighbours. It is possibly the world's single greatest conservation success story, Bald Eagles have gone from the brink of extinction to numbers never before seen in just fifty years.

This is the story of a thirty-year quest to discover the fundamental rules of nature. How are species organised into ecosystems? How do those ecosystems and the species within them change over time? Scientists think there must be a set of unwritten rules that bring order to a complex, chaotic world. And our clearest look into nature's rulebook comes from an unassuming creature: a six-inch lizard called an anole. Travelling through the American tropics, led by Jonathan Losos and scientist-filmmakers Neil Losin and Nate Dappen, they encounter remarkable lizards and capture species that have never been filmed before. They meet some of the world's top biologists to understand how anoles help us decipher the basic rules of nature, and discover why these fascinating lizards might hold the key to understanding the future of life on Earth.

Naledi: A Baby Elephant's Tale

1 x 60' or 1 x 90'

Naledi tells the incredible story of a baby elephant born into a rescue camp in the wilderness of Botswana. Born on an incredibly starry summer night in 2013, Naledi (which means 'star' in Setswana) was orphaned just six weeks later when her mother died. This meant that immediate action had to be taken to both comfort Naledi - and save her life. It took a dedicated team working around the clock to nurse her back to health. Naledi's boisterous yet loving personality ensures a deep bond with the staff at the rescue camp as well as the female elephants of the rescue camp, but this isn't just one elephant's story. Camp scientist Mike Chase has launched the most ambitious ever census of African elephants: a last ditch effort to ensure their survival. ## America In Color

It's easy to imagine that the past was lived in black and white, but of course it wasn't. This landmark series, which is back for a second series, uses modern colouration techniques to present a history of America in Color, for the first time. Narrated by Hollywood actor Liev Schreiber; decade by decade, this ambitious series puts the colour back in history, and brings the history back to life! From jazz-age speakeasies to the military attacks, from great historical events to cultural landmarks, iconic images of America are vibrantly brought to the screen. To make this landmark series, filmmakers spent 6,000 hours painstakingly scouring obscure archives, dusting off forgotten family vaults, and tracking down dedicated private collectors to find the 27 miles of film they needed – much of it not seen for nearly a century. The result is a feast for the eyes, and brings fresh excitement to seminal images of our time.

Smithsonian Time Capsule: 1968

1 x 60'

In 1968, things just wouldn’t stop happening, each passing week brought a new bombshell headline. Politically, the Revolution of ‘68 challenged old conservative regimes across Europe and Latin America. At home, opposition to the Vietnam War and engagement in the struggle for civil rights overcome non-violent philosophy to create a volatile mix of activism and rioting, greatly accelerated by the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert F Kennedy. Then a backlash makes ‘law and order’ candidacies successful and reshapes the political parties. Optimism turns to disappointment, but progress continues – from the first African American woman elected to Congress to the birth of the women’s movement to big wins in space with the Apollo missions. And throughout it all, Smithsonian Curators were collecting objects to help tell the stories for future generations.

Food Evolution

1 x 60' or 1 x 92'

From Academy Award nominated director Scott Hamilton Kennedy and narrated by esteemed science communicator Neil DeGrasse Tyson, Food Evolution is set amidst a brutally polarised debate marked by fear, distrust and confusion: the controversy surrounding GMOs and food. Travelling from Hawaiian papaya groves, to banana farms in Uganda to the cornfields of Iowa, Food Evolution wrestles with the emotions and the evidence driving one of the most heated arguments of our time. Enlisting experts and icons of the struggle such as Mark Lynas, Alison Van Eenennaam, Jeffrey Smith, Andrew Kimbrell, Vandana Shiva, Robert Fraley, Marion Nestle and Bill Nye, as well as farmers and scientists from around the world, this bold and necessary documentary separates the hype from the science to unravel the debate around food.

Mega Transports

6 x 60'

Everyone knows heavy haulage: large parts are transported on big trucks with yellow warning lights on streets. However, all that is peanuts compared to our 'mega transports': heavier, larger, more complicated and more unusual. These are transports that require pinpoint planning, which can only take place in certain time slots or with special safety precautions, and for which large teams plan months in advance before things are ready. Each episode accompanies an exceptional transport. How are the mega-yachts of the super rich carried across the seas? How do you get 19,000 containers at a time stacked on the largest container ship in the world? And even with the largest engine in the world, how do you get it through the eye of a needle into Port?

A Journey Into The Real Pakistan 2 x 60' or 1 x 90'

Decorated veteran Robert Gallimore travels to Pakistan to explore a country whose status as 'the most dangerous country in the world' threatens to overwhelm its rich and ancient history. Gallimore challenges the established narrative, and unveils the unexpected, unexplored side of - if not the most dangerous - perhaps the most misunderstood country in the world. Pakistani modern life is surprising: with a robust and transparent banking system, religious tolerance, a thriving culture and even modern shopping malls. Emerging from a turbulent past, Pakistan has a bright future in the form of investment into the Chinese-Pakistan economic corridor, billions of dollars pumped into the construction of an oil city and a trade route. This is a sensory feast, but also an opportunity to set the record straight on a country's vibrant, distinctive culture.

Chain Gang Girls

1 x 90' & 1 x 60'

Phoenix, Arizona. Home to America's most notorious sheriff, Joe Arpaio. Serving time in Maricopa County is brutal. Inmates do their time outside in military surplus tents, 365 days a year. And the sheriffs taken away all privileges: no television, no coffee, no cigarettes. He's even put women on a chain gang to teach them discipline and deter crime. Some women volunteer, some join to avoid punishment, but all fifteen women commit to 30 days of hard labor chained together in the public eye. Chain Leader Kylie Marks kicks marching practice into high gear. But their time is limited; the women must spend the majority of the Thanksgiving break trapped in their tiny cells. It's rough justice, and not everyone's idea of fair punishment, but it remains a remarkable story, and a portrait of a unique piece of 21st century America.

The Execution Of Gary Gilmore

2 x 60' or 1 x 60'

In January 1977, Gary Gilmore spoke his last words, 'let's do it', and was executed by firing squad. That simple act re-instated the death penalty in the US after a ten-year moratorium. The floodgates opened, and since then over 1,000 state sponsored executions have taken place in the US. Exclusive footage in this film sparks the Gilmore saga to life. Gilmore, who was convicted of murdering a gas-station attendant and a motel clerk without motive, wanted to be executed. He refused to appeal his verdict and insisted that he wanted to die. Through never-before-seen material, we re-tell a crucial story of American justice, and also revisit both sides of the contentious capital punishment debate. ## Colombia Revealed

Colombia's natural world is diverse and inspiring, but it is often overlooked as headlines are made elsewhere. This film charmingly explores the wonder of Colombia's landscape and wildlife, and finds that while many humans are an integral part of the ecosystem, others seem to work tirelessly to undermine it. A film of natural stories, striking splendour and surprising charm, we unveil a wild Colombia you won't forget.

Food Evolution

From director Scott Hamilton Kennedy and narrated by science communicator Neil DeGrasse Tyson, Food Evolution is set amidst a brutally polarised debate marked by fear, distrust and confusion: the controversy surrounding GMOs and food. Travelling from Hawaiian papaya groves, to banana farms in Uganda to the cornfields of Iowa, Food Evolution wrestles with the emotions and the evidence driving one of the most heated arguments of our time.

Luther vs Rome

When Martin Luther nailed his 95 'points for discussion' to Wittenberg's Castle church, his quiet life exploded into international confrontation, an argument with the Pope, and ultimately, the Protestant Reformation. A simple monk pitted against the might, power, and money of Rome. But while the religious, social and political consequences have been much discussed, we reveal a fundamentally human story of honesty, faith, and fortitude.

Naledi: A Baby Elephant's Tale

Naledi tells the incredible story of a baby elephant born into a rescue camp in the wilderness of Botswana. When she's suddenly orphaned at one month old, it's up to the keepers who look after the herd to keep her alive. Camp scientist Mike Chase has launched the most ambitious ever census of African elephants: a last ditch effort to ensure their survival. He is racing to defend a species while struggling to save a single life.

The Nuclear Requiem

This absorbing film is a meditation on why nuclear weapons still exist, 70 years on from their creation. The production of the documentary involved interviewing witnesses from a range of different perspectives. It also incorporates a specially composed musical piece by French composer Alain Kremski which beautifully underscores the continuing challenge of dealing with the most lethal weapon ever created by humankind.

Rooted In Peace

This film is a challenge to viewers to examine their values as human beings. Modern life finds us at war with each other, with our environment, and with the world. Director and award-winning filmmaker Greg Reitman takes us on a film journey to take notice, stop the cycle of violence, and proactively seek ways to find personal and ecological peace. Reitman heeds Maharishi Mahesh Yogi's words, that if the forest is to be green, every tree must be green.

The Trick With The Gun

What happens when friends risk their lives – and friendship – for the sake of a magic trick? The Bullet Catch is the most dangerous illusion in magic. Men and women have died performing it. Magician Scott Hammell and author Chris Gudgeon set out to perform their own version of the deadly trick, and get more than they bargained for. What begins as an exploration of the hidden world of magic ends as a study of a friendship falling apart.

Vitamina

This year $90 billion will be spent on vitamins and supplements. Every week, a new benefit is claimed. At the same time, vitamin pills are decried as a waste of money and their producers condemned. Many doctors claim most vitamin products are useless, or can even be harmful. Others point to peer-reviewed research showing they can be lifesavers. How do we decide what to take? How do we sort the sense from the nonsense? Presented by Dr Derek Muller.

Salam Neighbor

Two Americans head to the edge of war, just seven miles from the Syrian border, to live among 80,000 refugees in Jordan's Za'atari refugee camp. As the first filmmakers allowed by the UN to set-up a tent inside a refugee camp, Zach and Chris plunge into the heart of the world's most pressing humanitarian crisis. They uncover inspiring stories of individuals rallying, against all odds, to rebuild their lives and those of their neighbours.

Tomorrow's Power

We meet the people challenging our society's current power structures, aiming for a future with greater social and climate justice. We bring you to the war-torn, oil-rich Arauca province in Colombia where communities have been building a peace process from the bottom up; and to Germany where activists are pushing the country to fully leave behind the extraction of fossil fuels and complete its transition to renewable energy.

Wildlife In The Cantábrian Mountains

We explore a year in the life of the beautiful Cantábrian mountains. A tightly-packed range of canyons and forests, the warm sea produces areas of lush vegetation, which in turn provide an abundant natural habitat for wildlife. Over four seasons, we meet brown bears, Iberian wolves, wild cats, capercaillies, and even carnivorous plants, all of whom teach us the survival strategies they need to overcome the extreme climate conditions.
