

INSIDE EXTRAORDINARY HUMANS

4 X 1 HOUR – HIGH DEFINITION

A number of very special people walk this earth. Humans so rare and distinctive that we can't help but be curious about how they got that way.

How can conjoined twins attached at the head still live as individuals? What are the physical stresses of weighing 500 pounds? How do you live in an average size world when you are more than 7 feet tall? And what are the design challenges of being one quarter the size of everyone else?

Using CGI, we will look inside these extraordinary humans to discover the forces that have acted upon their DNA; examine the physical features to which they have adapted; and see how they are engineered differently from everyone else.

We also meet the people that have been shaped by one of these complex conditions and hear their compelling personal stories, full of heartbreak and hope.

Doctors and researchers provide larger context as we look at the theories, history and cutting edge science in order to understand the challenges of being 'exceptional' in a 'normal' world.
